

Performance at the Castle Special School

Four pupils from St Faith's visited the primary department at Castle Special School to play their instruments to the children. Pupils at the Castle School have a range of additional needs including physical, visual and hearing impairments as well as many being on the autistic spectrum. They all, however, have a love of music.

The children enjoyed having a range of instruments played live just for them and they responded by dancing and moving to the music. With help, some pupils were also able to explore the instruments and feel the vibrations as the music was played. It ended with the Castle pupils joining in with St Faith's by playing bells and shakers. All those involved had a great time and the St Faith's children particularly enjoyed seeing their music being responded to so positively.
