

Year 7 English

Year 7 pupils were given a letter-writing task. They had to imagine writing a letter to Michael Morpurgo with suggestions for a new book. Below is a letter from George (7L) asking him to write a book about rugby.

Monday 27th April

Dear Mr Morpurgo,

I am writing to ask if you could write a book about rugby my reason is that a lot of people like rugby like me, I have a passion about rugby. By making more money you could make books about football which is my other passion.

Your stories could be based on famous rugby players and you could base it on famous rugby coaches like all the good countries coaches.

You could base your stories on all the different positions in the game, like in the forwards and the backs they are different types of places that you play in on the field.

You could add bits like who I play for and where I play on the field. You could add in my favourite players and coaches, such as Maro Itoje and Eddie Jones.

I hope this letter has given you ideas about writing a new book and to persuade you in a nice way to maybe write a book about rugby. I hope you get this letter.

Yours sincerely,

George
