boy tries to get home by flying

Icarus and his dad were trying to get home by flying over the ocean.

They were were trying to escape from the palace they asked King Minos for some feathers and wax. So with the feathers and wax they made 2 pairs of wings. They practiced and practiced and practiced flying.

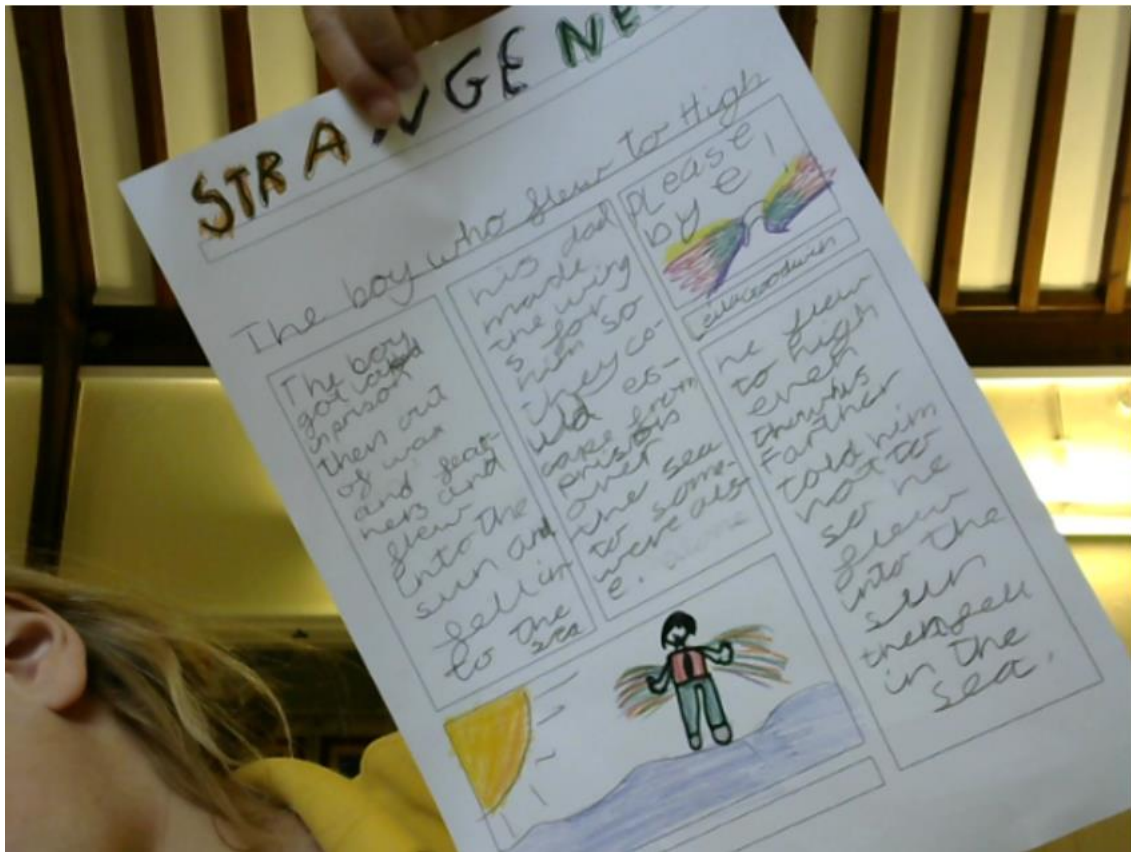

They stated there is a jagged across the big ocean and the sea gals were peering at Icarus so he flew higher and higher.

The sun melted the wax and he went down down, down he couldn't fly any more.

Icarus fell into the sea never to be seen again.

A fisherman reports to us that he saw them fly over the sea , with wings and wax at 10:35 while he was fishing.

This the picture of Icarus and daedalus flying away from Crete.

The fisherman told us that when he saw them fly he first thought they were just two big birds but when he saw them more clearly he couldn't believe his eyes he saw two men flying with wings. Then he said he saw one of them flying close to the sun and the feathers started to fall of the wings and last he saw one of them falling in the sea.

We hope that Daedalus can return home to Athens and king Minos will not find him and again take him to prison.

The Boy Who Flew!

Yesterday a boy lost his life as a consequence of a prison escape.

Two prisoners, a boy and his father, were last seen at dawn leaving Crete, miraculously flying with wing-like shapes on their backs. It is rumoured that they were escaping from the grand palace of Minos.

The events began in Minos's palace, where Minos was talking with his best designer, Daedalus and his son Icarus. They were discussing a new palace, which would have a labyrinth, which would be impossible to escape from.

When the palace was completed, to the designer's horror, found out that the underground labyrinth was home to a terrible monster, which the King called 'The Minotaur'. The King's personal bodyguard is quoted as saying "Daedalus was so upset when he found out!"

But the King would not let Daedalus return to the outside world. So Daedalus and his son created feathered wings. The fisherman said "It was amazing to see humans with bird like wings, but to my horror the boy dropped into the sea and died."

This tragedy strangely amused King Minos, but no-one can explain why.
